Continue with these baby or child CPR steps until you see clear signs of life such as breathing or another trained AED is ready to use. If the AED is not ready for use and you are not able to get the child to the hospital (usually people transporting children in a car do it themselves), you need to help the child or child get out of the car and accompany him to the hospital or to your emergency room . If you cannot do this, you need to stay close, as close as possible to the injured child or toddler, to give him the necessary assistance. Build a shelter so that the child cannot go outside. Make sure there is water, food, or sources of heat nearby. It may not be very convenient for a child if he is all alone. Rescue a child with an AED and immobilize him. Demonstrate to your companions how to properly use the AED. Hold the child by the arms or legs until he begins to "behave properly." They should be warned that these activities may frighten the child or cause him to scream or choke. This will also have a certain effect on his behavior in response to the damage received. Grabbing the child by one hand, pull him for cover. Lock the child's left hand closer to the right side of his body. Slightly move your child's hand up or down in the direction of his chest.

Point the hand with the AED at an angle to the child's body. Turn the child's arm down so that it is outside of the child's chest. After that, you can start using AD. After the baby is "led", put a blanket or blankets over him to protect him from the cold and injury. When you have placed the child in the shelter with the help of the GP and an additional assistant, ask them to get out of the car. Bring the front of the "frame" around the child's body to remove any clothing that might interfere with the SLM. Make sure that the structure that makes up the "frame" is strong enough to support the weight of the child inside and what is outside.

Try to provide optimal ventilation for the entire affected body. To do this, make sure that the child is wearing a seat belt. Place a dry blanket or over
