By Quinn Page Last year, the Chicago Police Department released a dramatic video showing the police shooting of Laquan McDonald, sparking mass protests and calls for a federal investigation. Now, the Feds are doing the same thing, with their own version of the McDonald video. Except, instead of the police shooting, they're showing footage of a homeless man's murder by police in Los Angeles. As a police officer tells the homeless man to "get on the ground," the suspect stumbles backwards and the officer then apparently shoots him. [dcquiz] The Los Angeles Police Department, rather than investigate the officers, said that the officer had a "reasonable belief" that the man "had a gun." A law-abiding citizen who is honest, hard-working, and honest is facing murder charges for $25. He is homeless, and that is what he chose to do with the day," LAPD Capt. Billy Hayes said in a statement at the time of the shooting. (RELATED: Black Power Activist's House Destroyed by Masons) In the video below, the suspect is carrying a bottle. But the man, Marvin Gaye Jones, was homeless, he was wounded in the foot, he was holding the bottle
