What it does: Creates a library of images for you to use on your desktop. Shows a pre-built library of images for you to use on your desktop. Allows you to create your own images with GIFs, videos or live streams. Allows you to select your own GIF, video or live stream as your desktop wallpaper. Runs on: Windows, macOS My review of Retroware-iCloud is that they seem to have it out for Apple. My personal experience and some advice might convince you to take them on at their own game. But, as usual, at a premium. There is a need for a player that will work on the iOS devices that won't cost you a small fortune to get it done. Retroware is a company that can do just that. It's a simple package that doesn't promise anything. No achievements, no micro-transactions, just an enjoyment of a company's games in your pocket. Features: The iOS version of Retroware has a single reason for being. They want to work on the devices that others ignore or don't even bother with. That's it. I. For starters, Retroware doesn't even require an app. They will work perfectly on the browser. II. It's a bare bones package that does not try to do much. III. Every game in the package is free. Now, that doesn't mean that they're giving them away. Many games are offered at a discount. That's because there is no time to waste with any of their games. They also have a way to compare scores and progress. That will let you know if you're making progress on each game. IV. They also let you know if you're up for any new titles. V. There are multiple versions of each game in the Retroware-iCloud package. I have no idea if that's a good thing or a bad thing. It might be good because I have no reason to know whether I'm enjoying a game or not. They give you the choice between normal, easy and arcade versions. The games that have a different version are only on iOS. PC and Mac players have the same options as iOS players. VI. Finally, they even list the date of each version of the game. On the negative side, Retroware-iCloud doesn't support multiplayer or keyboard/mouse controls. I'm sorry
