A cutting insert can be releasably bonded or otherwise attached to the front side of the body. Typically the body, insert, and/or cutting insert will be bonded or attached to each other. The cutting inserts can be held in a pocket, slot, or pocket/slot of the body. Typically such cutting tools have been formed of, or based on, cemented carbide. Cemented carbide bodies may be formed of a hard cemented carbide substrate, such as cubic boron nitride ("CBN") or silicon carbide ("SiC"), and a metal binder. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 6,997,527, hereby incorporated by reference in its entirety, discloses a cutting tool having a hard substrate, such as CBN, and a TiC-based binder phase dispersed homogeneously
