The melee combat is worse than everything else combined and, just like in TWD, your survivability is almost completely useless unless you're in a 10 or 12 person crowd of dead people. I'm not saying it's impossible to survive solo, but your skill caps, even if you have that optimal K/D is only like 4.5. I think Dawn really needs an overhaul. Everyone

Features Key:

The Dark & Turquoise World theme: Enter a world where the power of the Dark and the glory of the Kingdom of Valenwood collide in some unseen, unknown place.

Three Visionary Stories: Three unique stories made from the visions of one-eyed dreams who secretly dreamt over and over again in which they would spread the name of the land of Valenwood and proceed with its glory and charm.

Castle in the Sky: Distract the land of Valenwood with the grand sight of the Castle in the Sky full of mighty swordswomen who sleep endlessly in an ancient Nordic realm that overshadows the Brave Lands.

Heavy Haedin and Hard-hitting Viking Weapons: NPCs and monsters will have incredible stats. Use them to perform powerful parries and topple your opponent.

Elden Lords are lords that played a crucial role in the era of Valenwood, and as a result, some of them retain terrible memories and scars. These memories and scars influence how they develop their personality and their character as they freely wander the border lands of the Kingdom of Valenwood.

Warhammer 40,000: Space Marine The Not-So-New Space Marine 03/28/2019 "Between the crossbow and the hammer" is the motto of Space Marine, arguably the most iconic and most popular game in the Warhammer 40,000 universe (otherwise known as WH40K, and in the game universe). The game, developed by Relic Entertainment and starring Space Marine – the Space Marines of the noble House Librarius – is set in the 41st Millennium, during a time of great strife, when humanity is fighting for survival against a galaxy dominated by the Angels of Perdition and the Tyranids. Have you ever wondered how the Space Marine squadrons were formed to begin with, why they are named after Roman Gods, and what the differences are between one Space Marine squad and the other? Have you ever wondered why a Space Marine can be a Roman or a Maure, and why they even have a Horus Heresy? In Warhammer 40,000: Space Marine, you will finally learn the truth behind these mysteries...

Q: join() with pd.to_datetime When I paste some text with a date in, I get pd.to_datetime() for the text "date". I'm trying to join this text with the original dataframe, and I can't seem to get it to work. I think I'm getting the join as a string/list because it's appending to the value of the y column?
