Paterson has a historical downtown, a thriving arts district, the art and indie shops that line Pearl Street, and amazing food. You can get a slice of pizza for lunch and live music for dinner almost every night in Paterson. Our first stop was the Empire State Mills on the outskirts of downtown Paterson. We wandered from room to room including the fine (and first!) art deco clock and the old movie theater where multiple silent movies used to be shown. Since art deco is a popular style of decor these days, the Empire State Mills had several rooms with paintings and graphic art that looked like modern pieces. I really liked the pieces by Matt Bellisle and also Peter Holland's ceramics. On our way back to Paterson we stopped at our favorite restaurant since moving to the city. As of 2013, the family-owned, focused on great pizza, Little Oscar. The owner was a prime example of the slow food movement and grew up with his first job at Oscar's Pizza. It's a cozy little space and at times the pizza is terrific. The service was good and we were able to talk to the servers and owners about the history of the pizza, their recipes, and how they feel about the city they live in. Little Oscar definitely has a story to tell and I can't wait to see how it develops
