Comparison of Outcome of Surgical and Drug Treatments for Patients With Local Recurrence of Non-Small-Cell Lung Cancer. The aim of this study was to compare the outcomes of surgical and drug treatments for patients with local recurrence (LR) of non-small-cell lung cancer (NSCLC) after initial systemic treatment. This study retrospectively reviewed the medical records of NSCLC patients who developed LR after initial treatment. The patients were treated either by resection (R) or drug therapy (D). Progression-free survival (PFS), overall survival (OS), and survival time were evaluated and compared. Fifty-six patients were analyzed. The median PFS in the R group and the D group was 6.0 and 8.8 months ($P = 0.006$), the median OS was 26.6 and 38.8 months ($P = 0.022$), and the median survival time was 26.6 and 39.4 months ($P = 0.011$). Surgical resection may be the preferred treatment strategy for patients with LR of NSCLC. Sophomore QB Eddie Printz started the game by completing his only pass of the night, a four-yard toss to Dominique Fennell. Sophomore RB Chris Martin ran for four yards on his first carry of the night and freshman QB Danny O'Brien was introduced to the Spartans by completing two passes for eight yards. The offense stalled again in the first quarter and the defense was unable to force a punt. Both teams ended the quarter still scoreless. The offense continued its struggles in the second quarter. O'Brien was sacked once, RB Chris Martin ran for four yards and Printz completed his only pass of the half for 16 yards. On the first possession of the third quarter, Printz was unable to find his receivers, running for three yards on a keeper. O'Brien found his receivers but was unable to find the open man and his second pass was batted away by a defender. On Michigan State's next possession, O'Brien's third pass of the quarter was batted into the air and intercepted by the Wolverines' Demetrius Wilson. MSU's defense forced a safety and O'Brien was sacked on the first play of the fourth quarter, resulting in a quick punt. Printz threw an interception at the MSU 43-yard line on Michigan State's opening possession, and the Wolverines took advantage of it two plays later when An

A novel compound heterozygous mutation of the SLC26A4 gene in a Japanese girl with Pendred syndrome. Mutations of the SLC26A4 gene have been reported to be associated with Pendred syndrome, a syndrome characterized by sensorineural hearing loss and goiter. We reported a novel compound heterozygous mutation (K812X/A3243G) in a Japanese girl with Pendred syndrome. The patient showed typical manifestations of Pendred syndrome, including severe hearing loss in childhood and goiter. Immunohistochemical staining of the thyroid showed no staining for pendrin in the follicular epithelia or thyroglobulin in the colloid. The compound heterozygous mutation (K812X/A3243G) may be responsible for the Pendred syndrome in this patient. Apodised diffractive lens elements are characterised by an interference pattern or profile that is suitable for optimised operation over a large angular aperture. For example, an apodisation can be used in a collimated beam to reduce light intensity in a region corresponding to the waist of the beam. The use of a collimating lens (or lens element) near the source or near the image plane to reduce the width of the beam, is known, see U.S. Pat. Nos. 3,209,218 and 3,988,004, and US Application Publication No. 2015/0125188, among others. The refractive power of the lens in such use is effectively zero. Alternatively, an apodisation can be used in a converging beam to increase the effective convergence of the beam, thereby increasing the beam flux. The use of a converging lens near the source or near the image plane, is known, see U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,508,478 and 5,341,209, and US Application Publication No. 2014/0128503, among others. The refractive power of the lens in such use is effectively negative. In such use, the beam waist is typically situated somewhere in the sub-wavelength range.
