She appears in several of the novels of the House of Night series, and is one of the first characters readers meet in the series. In each novel she is a senior member of the Magic Bazaar, an organization run by the undead, in the fictional Victorian era. While she is often described as a sadistic witch, the novels suggest that Aunty Brenda is a product of her environment, not an individualized character. Theatre adaptations In 2006, Hedges gave a stage reading of House of Night, with Lisa James in the title role. The reading was part of Hedges' solo reading tour, which included readings in New York City, London, and Dublin. The reading was also part of a benefit performance with other young British writers, and was recorded and released on an audio CD as part of the CD recorded stage play series. Aunty Brenda was portrayed by Lisa James in the audio CD stage play, which also included readings from Hedges' other novels. The stage play also went on to tour schools, libraries and other venues around the United Kingdom. A director's cut of the audio CD was released in 2007. In 2016, Hedges returned to the stage with "The Gossip Game", a theatrical production starring Caitlin Hulme and Liane Balaban. This production was adapted from the stage play House of Night, and ran at the St. James Theatre in the West End from July to October 2016. In October 2016, Lisa James returned to the role of Aunty Brenda in a live stage reading at the Edinburgh International Book Festival. This reading was subsequently released as an audio CD of the reading as part of the BBC Audiobooks Theatre Series. Appearances House of Night series Aunty Brenda first appears in the House of Night series, where she is a member of the Magic Bazaar, an organization run by the undead. As an agent for the Magic Bazaar, Aunty Brenda is a part of the organization's intelligence gathering and acts as a magical advisor. Though she is depicted as a sadistic witch, Hedges says that Aunty
