Using Photoshop's Browsing Features The File Browser in Photoshop is called the Places panel and is docked at the top of the screen. It contains all of the folders and drives that you're on. Each folder or drive can be opened as a new window in the Places panel. You can then access the folder by clicking it. You may find that the tools for opening new windows in the Places panel are hard to find. The easiest way to open a window is to drag a folder, file, or any other item from the Places panel onto the Desktop or onto a folder icon. A window should open for you. There are a number of features of the Places panel that are not well explained in this book, but I cover them in more detail later in this chapter. The following sections deal with some important file types and folders. You can access any folder or drive in the Places panel simply by clicking it. You won't be able to see it until you click it, but if you have any subfolders you can access them all at once simply by clicking the main folder. You can also access other locations by double-clicking the icon. You can click the Change Location icon (the gear icon) at the top of the Places panel to see different locations, or use the Go menu item to open another location in the Places panel. Creating New Folders Creating new folders in Photoshop is a very simple process. The first step is to create a new empty folder. Select New Folder from the File menu and a new folder icon appears in the center of the current folder. You can

How does Photoshop work? The first thing you should know about Adobe Photoshop is that it is not the only graphics editing program out there. Yes, it is the most popular software that professional graphic designers and photographers use daily to create images, design websites and create animations, motion graphics and animated videos. Q: Control router through C# Is it possible to control a router through C#? I want to create a portal where the user can control his router. A: When you say "control a router" do you mean to setup a firewall, which may control how its services are accessed? or to configure WAN settings, which may affect how it communicates to the internet or other devices? Check out the Windows Management Instrumentation Commands which can be used to manipulate some aspects of routers and other devices. This is probably the most flexible way to control a router. For instance: You could create a couple of processes, say "RouterControl" and "WANControl", both of which can do the following: Detect connections to the router Configure firewall settings Set WAN/LAN settings In theory you could even create different "appliances" in Windows that represent different aspect(s) of the router. The commands are PowerShell-based, but you can use the WMI classes to create objects to run the commands on. Check out for the WMI reference. article ELIZABETH, New Jersey (AP) - A New Jersey couple accused of beating a baby to death in their home, then storing the child's body in a freezer for a year and disposing of the remains in two trash bags may have been helped by a friend who they had tried to get into the U.S. as a child, authorities said.
