Facial flaccidity (FF) is a rare condition associated with some diseases, in particular cortical blindness. In some children with infantile autism, flaccidity of the face is observed as a distinct sign. Although different hypotheses have been proposed to explain this condition, no consensus on its etiology exists. The objective of this study is to determine if there is a strong association between epilepsy and infantile autism and how FF is distributed among the patients. From January 2000 to December 2008, 41 patients with infantile autism were seen in the outpatient clinic of the neurological Department of Saint Joseph Hospital at the University of Fribourg. Of these patients, 25 (61%) had epilepsy. FF was observed in 10 patients (24%), 11 men and 9 women (22%). All patients with FF were diagnosed with epilepsy at the age of 2-7 years (mean 4 years). Among all the patients with epilepsy and FF, the mean age at diagnosis was 5 years, compared to 5 years and 9 months for patients without FF. There was a statistically significant correlation between epilepsy and FF. These data support the hypothesis that FF might be a symptom of infantile autism.Q: ?????????????? ?
