Seems like we have two of these servers: 121.23.133.47 - 2019-04-07 11:46:11.119 83.235.155.180 - 2019-04-07 11:48:42.820 So the first server name is running a git repository that changes hostnames: $ git -c core.quotePath=false status --porcelain On branch master Changes not staged for commit: (use "git add ..." to update what will be committed) (use "git checkout - ..." to discard changes in working directory) untracked content: (use "git add ..." to include in what will be committed) no changes added to commit (use "git add" and/or "git commit -a") The second server name has nothing associated with git and seems to have the same hostname: $ hostname 83.235.155.180 And the third server name is the original hostname and we have the git repository we want to deploy: $ git -c core.quotePath=false status --porcelain On branch master Changes to be committed: (use "git reset HEAD ..." to unstage) (use "git add ..." to update what will be committed) (use "git checkout - ..." to discard changes in working directory) (pre-rebase) [...] (use "git add" and/or "git commit -a") [...] $ git ls-remote fatal: read error In the above example I'm deploying to the "sql-of-supervisors" repository. Now my question is, if I'm using a hostname to deploy to, how do I know which repo to deploy? A: How to know the version of a git repository The question tells us that this is being done via git: git ls-remote This will output some metadata about the

I have a lot of question about a server for which I made a post and the command downloader, to the best of my knowledge I have everything and everything is ok on this, the problem is with the final download if you have also submitted your file and received it. If you have spent any of your connection quota, or have any errors, let me know. And the location of the movie download: And the location of the image: From what I understand the command should be downloading the files to the folder, but what it is doing is downloading from the file I submitted to the server and not to the folder. I ran a different command to test for errors which returned this: Error in stat: No such file or directory If anyone knows why this is and what I could do to fix this problem, I would be very appreciative. A: You can download files using streams, but you can not download them to the same folder in which you uploaded the file. You can download a file as a stream to a temp folder in which you keep all that kind of files. How to download a file in a stream using curl (using wget, curl, or others): $ curl --data-binary @input.zip --output output.zip To download a file to a directory (using wget, curl, or others): $ wget --output-document=/tmp/file.zip --unzip-input=/tmp/file.zip Note: -data-binary: Upload binary data without decoding. -output: Write the output to file output.zip. -unzip-input: Unpack archive using gzip format. It may happen that you don't have access to download the file

As a resident of Toronto's east end, the piano bar's owner Debbie Samson has been watching the scene change — from East York (with its evolving student population) to the gentrifying downtown core — and in tandem seen a changing relationship between the musicians and Toronto audiences, from warring factions to greater empathy. click to enlarge Siempre in Swing: A History of the Canadian Jazz Orchestra. Thomas Dodds's new book charts the early jazz years of Canada's premier jazz ensemble. As part of Artspeak's inaugural FUSE program, she sat down with The Breakdown's Mik Martin to reflect on the past, present and future of The Snail's Den, and how the place — with its roots in the mid-1960s and continuing dedication to music, booze, culture and deep down good times — holds up under the pressures of Toronto's changing socio-political climate. The Old Guard click to enlarge Some of the original members of the Snail's Den Piano Bar. "I think the Toronto scene — East York, Etobicoke, Yorkville — was a little bit more business friendly in those days," says Debbie, reflecting on the declining cultural and artistic tolerance in Toronto. "Back then, there were a lot of people who didn't want to go to the theatre because there wasn't any theatre going on, let alone jazz, poetry, whatever. The place was a safe place for people who wanted to be around a bunch of like-minded people and want to discuss jazz." Debbie's early experience in Toronto's jazz scene didn't involve the music; her first, and only, formal music education was in piano and singing. But she wasn't being paid to attend school, and she recalls the Snail's Den as the first place where she could truly "have fun" with music — both in her private performances and shared
