The safety and immunogenicity of an updated pandemic influenza A(H1N1)2009 (pH1N1) candidate vaccine (A/California/7/2009 (pandemic [H1N1] 2009-like vaccine [CIV]) manufactured and to be distributed by Novartis Vaccines & Diagnostics, Cambridge, Massachusetts, was evaluated in two separate phase 1 studies. In the first study, 12 subjects received either three doses (n = 6) or one dose (n = 6) of pH1N1 vaccine. No serious vaccine-related adverse events (AEs) were reported, although five subjects experienced slight pain at injection site. Seroconversion rate was 100% with all subjects in both dose groups achieving a 4-fold or higher increase in hemagglutination inhibition (HI) antibody titer to pH1N1 on day 21 after vaccination, and neutralizing antibodies were detected in all subjects. In the second study, 24 subjects received either three doses (n = 11) or one dose (n = 13) of pH1N1 vaccine. No serious vaccine-related AEs were reported. Seroconversion rate was 100% in the 3-dose group and 88.2% in the 1-dose group. The GMT for all subjects was 43 after 3 doses and 105 after 1 dose. Neutralizing antibodies were detected in all subjects postvaccination. These studies support the safety and immunogenicity of the Novartis pH1N1 vaccine and the encouraging safety and immunogenicity data provided suggest further evaluation of the pH1N1 vaccine is warranted.Q: undefined method `prep 6d1f23a050
