Chris MoneyMaker has played in 163 events at major poker tournaments to date. And on July 27, he made history when he walked away with the top prize of $8 million in a $10 million World Poker Tour (WPT) event. The cash prize paid by the WPT, a subsidiary of World Series of Poker (WSOP) owner Caesars Entertainment, is, of course, much larger than what a typical player receives at a $1,500 major poker tournament. WPT events are one-million-dollar buy-ins, whereas tournaments generally contain buy-ins between $5,000 and $100,000. The WPT has a nine-year track record of putting on major events featuring top-notch poker talent and putting together exciting, high-stakes poker tournaments. And Moneymaker was the ninth-ranked player in the field of 745 players. Not only did he make history, but he set himself up to become one of the most successful poker players of all time. If he can follow the career trajectories of other poker superstars like Phil Ivey and Michael Mizrachi (who are also from Moneymaker's home state of Kentucky), he could double or even triple his current take-home pay. The WPT is putting together three big tournaments in the next two months. The first two will be the $25,000 No-Limit Texas Hold'em tournaments in August, in Lake Tahoe, Calif., and the $10,000 No-Limit

Hold'em Championship, in Atlantic City, N.J., in September. The third, the $10,000 No-Limit Hold'em Shootout, will be held in Las Vegas in October. No player on the 2012 WPT Grand Slam Final Table has appeared in a previous WPT event
