[Aggressive periodontal disease. 3. The role of surgery]. The complete elimination of dental plaque and calculus is only the first step in the control of periodontal disease. A careful analysis of the pathological structure of the periodontium as well as of the patho-physiology of the inflammatory periodontal diseases is required in order to determine the most appropriate therapeutic method for each patient. The different treatment options (local and surgical) should then be planned with a view to achieving the best possible outcome. The decision on therapy must include not only clinical and radiographic findings, but also the potential risk factors for the individual patient. The ultimate objective of any periodontal therapy is the reestablishment of a periodontal structure that is resistant to resorption and which can tolerate physiological stresses without subjecting the supporting tissues to damage. All but the most jaded of geeks will acknowledge an affinity for the show that first made it to screens: The Cosby Show. The show is a classic, an icon of a generation and an absolute joy to watch. While I can't say I've seen every episode, the episodes I have, I loved. It taught me about family, it taught me about the struggles of being a black man in America and it taught me about how to take responsibility for my actions and my life. I learned to take what's good about my life and build on that; how to use that in the real world and how to acknowledge and recognise that I can make a difference, that I can improve the lives of those around me. For everyone who made this a show of their childhood, it was teaching us lessons about our future. I wish more people had made this show and had stuck with it. Perhaps if it had, the world we live in today wouldn't be so troubled, so often so cynical. After that, so many other shows came and went, but I was a constant viewer of at least a handful of them, even for long enough to have the show be a part of me. Friends, The Wire, Battlestar Galactica, The West Wing, Fringe, True Blood, Community, South Park, The Office. My favourite shows of all time. This was the one show I went back to week c6a93da74d
